

To Neville,

“When I considered my options for future professional development within the welding industry, I was a little overwhelmed by the rigour of study and training required to achieve my goals. After a great deal of research and individual meetings with conventional training providers I was referred to AWS, a company that provided training with the emphasis on mentoring.

The capabilities held within the AWS team coupled with the welding skills coaching concept have enabled me to come ahead leaps and bounds, It provides me with access to professionals such as welding specialists and welding engineers, a luxury I doubt I would have been provided from the conventional method of training. The mentoring and training are delivered by people who have been out there, have done the job and are focussed on bring out the true potential of every welder. The training is provided and demonstrated on problems faced by everyday welders on everyday jobs in everyday conditions, not just paraphrased out of text books based on theory – Real Welding.

I look forward to coming off hitch and going to AWS for more training and discussing with the team how I put my new found skills into practice whilst in the field and consolidating what I have learnt – How training should be. The team at AWS are always available for me even when I am in the field at remote locations and always find time to discuss the challenges I face and steer me in the right direction.

I am looking forward to developing a life long association with the AWS team past my training and will certainly be recommending their services to any person wishing to further their professional careers.

Thanks for all your help

Regards

Dion James
